The PLACES Project

THE EXHIBITION

PLACES (Portraits and Landscapes of Academic Community Engaged Scholarship) is a research project funded by Italy's Projects of Relevant National Interest (PRIN) programme.

The exhibition presents 8 photographic portraits of Italian, French and British academics. Each portrait explores how individual researchers navigate the tensions between institutional expectations and community commitments. The exhibition aims to stimulate public debate about the role of universities for their reference communities.

PLACE OF EXHIBITION: ground floor of the Faculty of Social Sciences UG

Centre for Sustainable Development (CZRUG)

The Centre for Sustainable Development at the University of Gdańsk is an interdisciplinary hub that brings together researchers, students, public institutions, businesses, and NGOs to advance the United Nations' Agenda 2030 and the Sustainable Development Goals. Rather than focusing solely on environmental issues, the Centre promotes a holistic approach that integrates sustainability into research, education, culture, social engagement, and university life.

One of the Centre's most distinctive initiatives is the Green University programme, which transforms the campus into a living laboratory for sustainable solutions. It encourages the university community to develop practical projects that reduce environmental impact while promoting responsible resource management and climate awareness.

The Centre is also recognised for its innovative programmes, including the Energy Transition Lab, which supports communities and decision-makers in the transition to clean energy, the Migration Observatory, providing research and expert analyses on migration, and the More-than-Human Studies Lab, an international initiative connecting academia, artists, and NGOs to explore new perspectives on sustainability and the relationship between humans and the natural world.

Beyond research, the Centre actively engages the wider community through public lectures, interdisciplinary workshops, international partnerships, student internships, and the University Conversations on Sustainable Development series. These activities create opportunities for students and citizens alike to collaborate on real-world sustainability challenges and contribute to building a more resilient and inclusive society.
